No records, but tossers, crowd enjoy 'fantastic day'

By Patricia McCarthy

So, no ... 220 didn't even come close to setting a world record for the number of people tossing water balloons to each other at the same time. It was 212 short on June 15 at Fort Williams.

But Family Fun Day organizer Ted Smith says he can't imagine even one of the people taking part in the so-called attempt cared at all if a record came to pass. "Nobody really expected to set a

Town takes first steps toward planning really big party

By Bob Dodd

A committee has been authorized to begin planning for Cape Elizabeth's 250th anniversary of its incorporation in 1765.

This milestone will be reached in 2015.

The yet-to-be-appointed Cape Elizabeth 250th Anniversary Committee will be given one of the broadest charges ever from the Town Council, according to Town Manager Mike McGovern after a June 10 meeting.

The full charge reads simply, "The purpose of the committee is to provide leadership in celebrating the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of Cape Elizabeth."

Councilors established a temporary ad hoc committee to serve until the end of 2015. The council's appointments committee is expected to solicit applications in the fall.

The Cape Elizabeth Historical Preservation Society recommended the establishment of the committee. Initial brainstorming by the group generated ideas such as a Walking History Trail with permanent plaques at sites both present and long gone: for example, the Shore Road trolley shelter, the Casino and theater and the Cape Cottage Post Office.

Ideas also included coordinating the activities of several existing events such as the Memorial Day parade, Family Fun Day and the TD Beach to Beacon 10K race.

"The town had a great celebration during the 200th anniversary back in 1965," noted McGovern. "It was a really big deal."

The Massachusetts General Court incorporated Cape Elizabeth on Nov. 1, 1765. The community then became independent of the region named Falmouth that included what is now Portland, South Portland, Falmouth, part of Westbrook and Cape Elizabeth.

Cape Elizabeth went through a second transformation in 1895, when the northern portion of the town separated off over a public water dispute and became South Portland.

Hearings set on changes related to construction

By Wendy Derzawiec

The Planning Board will hold public hearings in July on two proposals that would affect construction in Cape Elizabeth.

The first would change the town's definition of the "natural high-water line" on shoreline property; the other would establish neighbor notification of building permits granted for outside renovations.

The board will hear public comment on both proposals at 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 16, at Town Hall.

The proposal to change the definition of the normal high-water line in the town's zoning ordinance was initiated by Code Enforcement Officer Ben McDougal, who joined the town staff in January. "During my first five weeks as code enforcement officer, the biggest question for me has been: How will I interpret the definition of normal high water line of coastal waters?" McDougal said in a March memo to the Town Council.

The current definition puts the line at the top of a bank, beach or cliff above high tide, anywhere that is the "apparent extreme limit of the effect of the tides."

The line is "crucial" for administration of shoreland zoning requirements, according to Town Planner Maureen O'Meara, but Cape Elizabeth's definition is vague and results in a case-by-case determination of normal high-water line, she said at the Planning Board's June 18 meeting.

McDougal instead would like to use the definition used by the state as part of shoreland zoning, O'Meara said, and the proposal up for public hearing does that, except for its definition of coastal wetlands. The board's preferred language for coastal wet-

Just-graduated Cape homeschooler, age 14 (!), thanks teachers before heading to Berkeley

As a graduating homeschooler, I will not have a chance to thank my many teachers as most students do.

So I would like to take this opportunity to express a heartfelt shout-out to all Cape Elizabeth educators who taught me or guided me over the years, including at Pond Cove and Cape Middle schools (first to fifth grade, 2004 to 2009) and during my home-school years (2009-present).

I will be attending the University of

Remy Delva

California, Berkeley, as a freshman, studying honors physics beginning this fall. (I'll be 14 when I start.)

Special thanks to Mrs. Karen Abbott, Ms. Talya Edlund, Mrs. Holly Forsyth, Mrs. Sally Connolly, Mrs. Caitlin Ramsey, Mrs. Marguerite Lawler-Rohner, Mrs. Gretchen McCloy, Mr. Kerry Kertz, Rachel Davis at the Thomas Memorial Library, Andrew Kemp at Richards Community Pool; and former Middle School Principal, Mr. Steve Connolly, who always encouraged me to learn at my own pace.

You are the best teachers ever! Thank you for everything you taught me.

Retiring Mr. Paul Casey gives 'deepest thanks'

Dear Cape Elizabeth school community, I would like to extend my deepest thanks for the series of retirement celebrations that occurred on my behalf over the past few weeks.

It has been a privilege and honor to have been part of the Cape Elizabeth school system for the past 24 years.

In my role as teacher, coach and mentor, I have come in contact with many wonderful students and families.

I will indeed always be grateful for the opportunities I have been given in this wonderful school system and community.

Thanks to all.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE COLUMN

Wrap-up: Legislators address 'skills gap,' health care costs, more

By Rep. Kim Monaghan-Derrig House District 121

Much has happened over the last five months in Augusta. With daily sessions since April, the 126th Legislature plans to adjourn Wednesday, June 26 (The Courier's publication date). This article will address important issues to date.

Legislators passed separate bills to complete payment of the hospital debt (LD 1555) and to accept federal health care dollars covering 70,000 uninsured Mainers (LD 1066).

With the final payment to Maine hospitals totaling $490 million in combined state and federal dollars, we will have paid our bills, ensuring a stronger economy.

The bipartisan compromise on LD 1066, "An Act to Increase Access to Health Coverage and Qualify Maine for Federal Funding," was vetoed by Gov. Paul LePage.

The bill would have directed the state to accept federal health care dollars to cover uninsured Mainers for three years, with a sunset on Dec. 31, 2016 before the reduction in federal dollars. The measure was unanimously supported by Democrats, Independents and five Republicans, but the override veto ultimately failed by two votes.

Maine faces a dental shortage in rural areas of the state, with 55 percent of Maine children lacking dental access. LD 1230 would have established licensing for mid-level dental hygiene therapists to provide limited oral care focused on prevention. Despite a strong bipartisan vote in the Maine House, the state Senate failed to pass the measure.

The Joint Select Committee on Maine's Workforce and Economic Future, a panel I was proud to serve on, developed LD 90, a bill that addressed our state's "skills gap." The bill was formed by open dialogue among workers, educators and businesses.

More than 50,000 Mainers are currently unemployed or underemployed, and over the next five years, 4,000 jobs will be left unfilled because the current workforce skills do not align with the needs of employers. These are staggering numbers. The bill addresses workforce job training programs for small businesses, technical training and strengthening "soft skills" employers are seeking.

This is important for all recent high school and college graduates to know:

Many business owners testified that these "soft skills" – the ability to clearly communicate, be punctual, work as a team, and the ability to be flexible – are equally, if not more important, than technical skills.

The lobster industry has been a cornerstone of the state's economy for more than 100 years. The Legislature rejected LD 1549, a bill that would have allowed ground-fishermen to keep lobster bycatch and sell it out of state.

It would have removed the prohibition on trawlers and allowed ground-fishermen to catch and sell "incidentally" caught lobster. This could have undermined the sustainability of the traditional lobster industry in Maine.

Two key bills remain to be determined: the State Budget and the Omnibus Energy bill. Both were vetoed by the governor and will require a two-thirds override from the Legislature. Final action will be taken when the Legislature returns June 26.

It is an honor to serve as your state representative. If you have questions, please email me at kmderrig@maine.rr.com. Until next time, thanks for reading.

CETV public-access Channel 3 to go digital July 23

From www.capeelizabeth.com

Time Warner Cable has announced that as of July 23, the signal for Cape Elizabeth's public access channel will be delivered in a digital format as part of the company's migration to all-digital content.

Customers who have digital service from Time Warner will see no change. The new signal will be "mapped" to Channel 3 so that customers with digital set-top boxes will still see town meetings, the community bulletin board and other broadcasts on that channel.

The same is true for customers who have CableCARDS or digital adapters, both issued by Time Warner.

Customers using televisions with QAM tuners to receive digital programming will be able to see CETV on Channel 121.2, although the actual channel number displayed may vary depending on the make and model.

"In addition, it may be necessary to perform a new channel scan before you are able to view these channels," said Shelley Winchenbach, director of government relations for Time Warner in Maine and New Hampshire.

Winchenbach's letter announced the digital transition for Cumberland County public, educational and government channels to municipal officials earlier this month.

"Time Warner Cable ("TWC") will take another important step towards adding additional programming and improving Internet speeds by reclaiming bandwidth through providing existing programming in digital format only," the letter says.

Analog channels require up to 14 times more bandwidth than digital channels, the letter says.

Joli Plucknette-Farmen, public relations manager for Time Warner based in Rochester, N.Y., would not say how many subscribers Time Warner has in Cape Elizabeth, but that about 75 percent of customers in New England already subscribe to digital services.

For those with analog TVs only, Time Warner will offer digital-adaptor devices free of charge for a limited time.

Customers should contact Time Warner, 1-855-286-1736, by Sept. 23 to obtain digital adapters and remotes at no cost until Dec. 31, 2014. Beginning Jan. 1, 2015, each adaptor will cost 99 cents a month.

Family Fun Day

record," says Smith, who has been in charge of the annual community event for 13 years and typically runs the day's popular face-painting operation.

Organizers got excited this winter and dreamed up the big idea of going for a world record (!). But as the day of the event grew closer and volunteers looked into what actually would be required to pull off such a feat, it all seemed too daunting, Smith explains.

Among the requirements: Participants would need to divide into set groups of 50 with each group monitored following a list of involved regulations; a videographer, photographer and security would be required; participants would have to register and the lists had to be notarized, sent off to be verified and renotarized, and so on.

"It became well beyond our scope with our limited resources," concedes Smith. "So we decided to just see what what we could do and have fun with it. Everybody had a great time, and we had way more people involved in the toss than in previous years."

The town lucked out this year with the weather, which was mostly sunny and pleasant – and not too hot.

"You never can tell about the weather here," says Smith, "but it was just a fantastic day that Saturday and that went a long way to making the day a great success. We estimate we had about 3,000 or 4,000 people here. All the vendors – everything from chicken on a stick to strawberry shortcake – said they did well, and a lot of organizations raised money. It was definitely one of the better Family Fun Days we've had."

If you missed this year's great community parade, the ever-popular dog show, fried dough, an Extreme Monkey Bounce, a squirt-gun game, rock climbing or moon bounce, there's always next year.

Smith also added with a good-natured (and tired) sigh and a chuckle that planning for 2014 starts in December.

Among many other things, Family Fun Day participants could get their faces painted, "monkey-jump" off a trampoline, talk to a balloon expert or even a moose, take part in a parade, play games, watch a dog show, listen to music, toss water balloons, soak up the sun, eat, drink, buy artwork and crafts, and support local businesses and organizations.

lands describes all areas below the highest annual tide definition, and is close enough to the state definition to satisfy the code officer, O'Meara said.

The second hearing looks at a proposal to require the town to notify residents within 50 feet of a home for which a building permit has been issued for exterior renovations.

The proposal, also an amendment to the zoning ordinance, would require the town to notify abutters 50 feet from a property where a building permit has been issued for within 10 feet of a setback, or 125 feet of a normal high-water line.

Both proposals for zoning-ordinance amendments were sent to the Planning Board by the Town Council.

Councilors debated the 50-foot criterion, which was recommended by McDougal

"I tried in good faith to find somebody. It turns out it would have to have access by the public in order to have a conservation easement."

— Cape resident Winslow Pillsbury, seeking to subdivide a lot and endorsed by the council's ordinance subcommittee. Some councilors believed the distance would exclude interested neighbors, but Planning Board members agreed that 50 feet would encompass all direct abutters.

"This seems to be the appropriate notification group and it's also an appropriate allocation of staff time," said board Chairwoman Victoria Volent.

After the hearings, the board will likely vote on its recommendations to the Town Council, which will hold hearings of its own before enacting any amendments.

New condition added for permit

In other matters on June 18, the Planning Board agreed to a new condition for its March approval of a private-accessway permit for property at 10 Clinton Road.

Lot owner Winslow Pillsbury plans to divide the 4.2-acre parcel into two lots, neither of which has enough frontage on a public road. An existing drive would be improved and used as the private access.

The board had approved the permit with 10 conditions.

Pillsbury was able to meet all but one, which required a third party such as the town or the Cape Elizabeth Land Trust to hold a conservation easement limiting further subdivision of the property.

"I tried in good faith to find somebody," Pillsbury told the board.

"It turns out it would have to have access by the public in order to have a conservation easement," he said.

The Land Trust, for example, was not interested because residents would need cross roads and private property to get to the lot, Pillsbury said.

The town's attorney was also concerned about using a "conservation" easement in this way, said O'Meara.

The new condition calls for "reciprocal restrictive covenants" between the two lots restricting each to one single-family dwelling and accessory buildings.

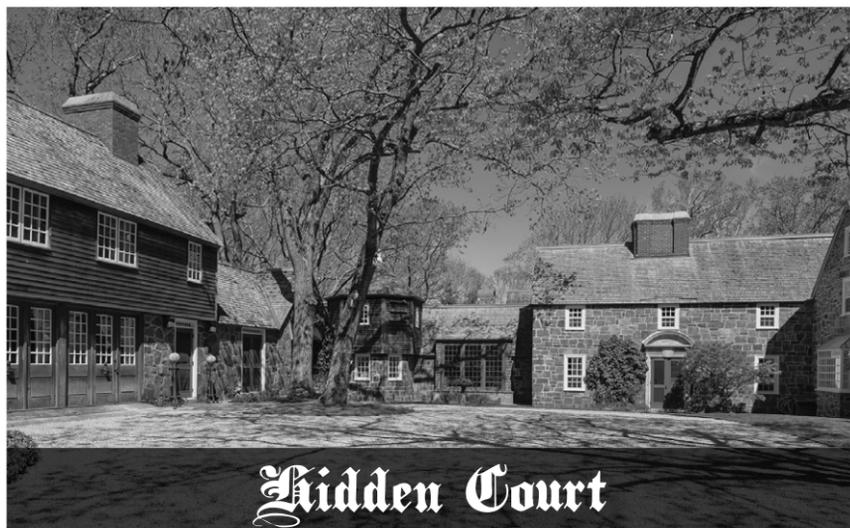

The owner of each lot would be responsible for enforcing the other's restriction.

The lot is in the Residence C zoning district, which has a minimum lot size of 20,000 square feet. The conservation easement was intended to guarantee Pillsbury's current plan for no more development on the property.

Our next color issue is August 7 and will include highlights of the TD Beach to Beacon 10K Road Race. Deadline for ads is July 26.

WHAT THE HECK IS AN 'ORGANIC MATTRESS'? AND WHAT'S THE BIG DEAL?

The big deal is that the modern family should be sleeping on organic mattresses because the typical mattress you buy contains:

- Polyurethane
- Stain-resistant and flame-retardant chemicals
- Cotton grown with pesticides
- Latex made from petroleum

Guess how many of those are in an organic mattress? Zero. And ... it's hypoallergenic.

Watch artists paint in Cape on July 14; then bid on paintings during CELT auction

When 31 artists paint at scenic places around town on Sunday, July 14, community members will be able to watch them at work.

That night, during the Cape Elizabeth Land Trust's sixth annual Paint for Preservation wet-paint benefit, the newly created artwork will be auctioned live at a tented reception at Ram Island Farm.

"Since CELT is dedicated to protecting, celebrating and caring for our local lands, it is wonderful to see so many familiar properties interpreted in such dramatic and original ways," said Cape resident Jean Hayes, who is co-chairing the event with Cape resident Susan Leighton.

This year's painters will include 28 artists from Maine – including Cape Elizabeth artists Bill Barton, Cooper Dragonette and Ted Smith – and artists from Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and New York.

Jean Maginnis and Wes LaFountain, the founders of the Maine Center for Creativity in Portland, selected the artists in a juried process. Samples of the artists' work are available at www.capelandtrust.org/paintforpreservation/2013, where a map of the artists' painting locations will be posted closer to the date of the event.

Reception and auction tickets are $50 in advance and $60 the day of the auction, and reservations are required.

Go to the CELT office at 330 Ocean House Road, visit the Paint for Preservation website, or call 767-6054 to make reservations or buy raffle tickets to win a granite and bronze sculpture by Maine artist Lise Becu.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the nonprofit CELT's Saving Cape's Great Places initiative, which is committed to the permanent conservation and stewardship of lands cherished by the Cape Elizabeth community.

For a guy who began taking pictures only a few years ago, 21-year-old Ezra Wolfinger's resume looks an awful lot like a pro's.

Wolfinger, a Bates College student who is spending the summer as a photography teaching assistant at the Maine Media Workshops in Rockport, has published pictures in The New York Times, The Denver Post and The New York Daily News.

His stills have been used for publicity by the Discovery Channel and Animal Planet, and his photos have been selected for 1x.com, a curated online photo gallery.

Eight of Wolfinger's photographs soon will be on display at Cia, 72 Ocean St., South Portland. The show will kick off on Friday, June 28, with an open house planned from 8 to 10 p.m. The ocean-themed exhibit will run through Aug. 20.

Since he picked up a camera two years ago, Wolfinger, a 2010 Cape Elizabeth High School graduate who is majoring in political science at Bates, has not given it a rest.

"I have been taking photographs for two years now, which isn't that long, but I have been taking pictures almost every day for those two years so I have learned a lot fast," he said.

Wolfinger has been on intimate terms with cameras most of his life.

"I have had more camera crossings in the background than most Hollywood extras," said Wolfinger, who is the son of Emmy and Peabody-Award winning Cape Elizabeth documentary filmmakers, Kirk and Lisa Wolfinger. "Growing up in a filmmaking family, I've been able to participate behind the scenes and in front of the camera for most of my life."

Wolfinger appeared in his parents' documentaries, "UFOs: Interrupted Lives," "Desperate Crossings: The Story of the Mayflower," and "Dirty Bomb Attack," but his heart was on the other side of the lens, he said.

"My real interest has always been behind the scenes with the gear. On most of those films I was too young to be very useful but I always carried and gripped when it was necessary and I hung out with the camera department whenever I could."

Starting when he was 15, Wolfinger worked on his parents' films with the camera, grip, and electric departments. In the past year, he was hired and paid to be a set photographer on two productions.

For Animal Planet's "Ice Cold Gold," and the Discover Channel's "How North America was Born," he did grip work and electrical work and also was responsible for publicity photos.

Recently Wolfinger's focus has been on portraits and people. His pictures of people have run in The New York Times and The New York Daily News and will be featured on the soon-to-be released album cover for singer Amy Allen.

His photos can be viewed at his Facebook website, Ezra M. Wolfinger Photography.

Stepping into the Sesquicentennial

Edward I. Woodbury

A Cape Courier series by Cape Elizabeth resident Ellen Van Fleet follows the Civil War through the eyes of people who lived in Cape Elizabeth 150 years ago, when the Civil War was in its third year. Using Portland author Paul Ledman's book, "A Maine Town Responds," as the main guide, the series includes both short entries from the Portland Transcript, a newspaper, and letters from a local soldier who served on the western front. Items from the Portland Transcript and from soldiers' letters are reported verbatim.

Sleeping in Rifle Pits – A letter from Vicksburg says that many men stay in the rifle pits day and night. There is one that extends nearly half a mile, which is only three feet wide, but about 10 feet deep. In the side of this they have cut bunks like those upon a ship. A man measures himself and takes a recess about his size, spreads his India-rubber blanket in it, and sleeps as quiet as at home. [Portland Transcript]

June 27, 1863 – There are several hundred men engaged on the three forts in our harbor, and when at half past 5 p.m., they take to their boats to come up to the city, the scene is a lively one. There is much competition to see which boat shall reach the wharf first, and races are frequent and exciting. Sailboats and rowboats do their best, and the fleet comes up in fine style. [Portland Transcript]

A lawsuit has grown out of the poisoning of a bed of oysters by petroleum oil in our harbor. The oil was pumped into the dock from the hold of the bark Hebron, where it has leaked from her cargo. It made a bad smell and covered the water with an oily scum which was seen as far down the harbor as House Island. The oyster beds of one of our oyster dealers planted near the Cape, were destroyed by it, causing a loss of several thousand dollars. A suit has therefore been commenced against the owners of the bark Hebron, and the case is one of novel interest, as there is, we believe, no statute which strictly meets it. [Portland Transcript]

There are 112 prisoners in our State Prison; three of them are wife-murders. [Portland Transcript]

A learned astronomer has discovered that the sun is three millions of miles nearer to the earth than previous calculations have made it. We thought the weather was growing warmer. [Portland Transcript]

Our quiet little city was on Saturday last waked up by a nearer approach of the realities of war than we have before experienced since the outbreak of the rebellion. ... The cutting out of a government vessel in our harbor, the pursuit and capture of the pirates by an impromptu fleet of steamers manned by citizens and soldiers

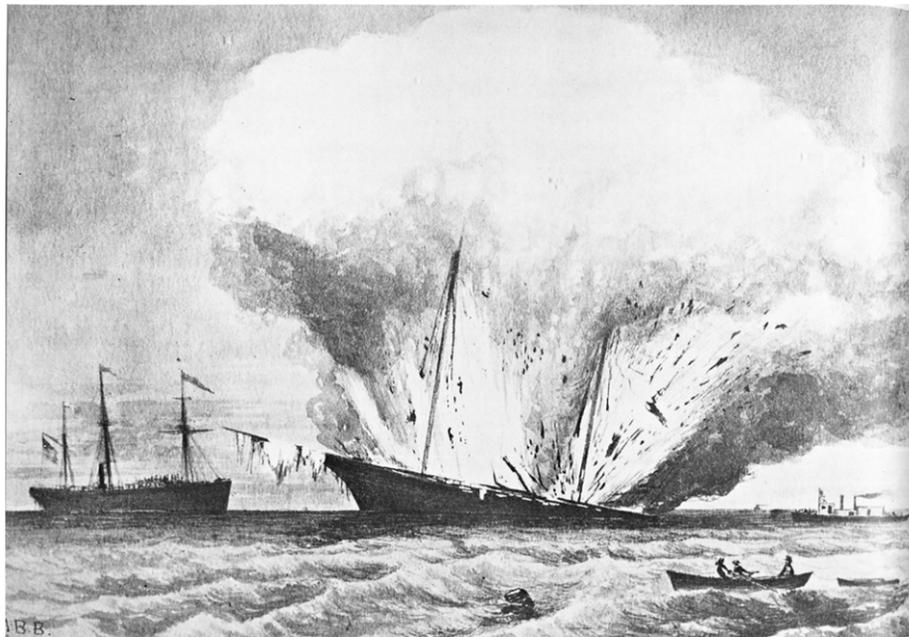

– these were the substantial facts on which were based ... exciting rumors. [Portland Transcript]

The revenue cutter Caleb Cushing has been ... lying at her anchorage in our harbor ... [due to] the illness of her commander. ... The result of all is we have lost the cutter, but have as good as captured the Tacony, which has been committing such depredations among our fishermen and merchantmen, and have their officers and crew prisoners of war.

It was a bold push thus to enter our harbor and cut out a vessel from under the guns of our forts, but the rebels have found our citizens equal to the emergency. [Portland Transcript]

A report that a rebel gunboat was landing men on the Cape to rescue the rebel prisoners at Fort Preble at an early hour on Monday morning set the alarm bells to ringing and called out our citizens to the defence. There was a prompt rally, but the alarm was unfounded. [Portland Transcript]

The rebel officers at Fort Preble have plenty of gold, and have sent over to the city to buy nice things to eat and good clothes to wear. [Portland Transcript]

Painting by Harrison B. Brown

During the Battle of Portland Harbor on June 27, 1863, Confederates who had seized the U.S. Revenue Service cutter, the Caleb Cushing, in Portland Harbor blew it up in the waters off Portland Harbor. The Rebels were caught and held as prisoners of war at Fort Preble.

Editor's note: Cape Elizabeth resident Scott Dyer Jordan left his wife Judith and their three children in 1863 to serve as a naval ensign in the Civil War. From 1847 to 1852 he was a mariner, plying trade routes in New England, England, the West Indies, the Caribbean and the southern coast of the United States. While at sea he sent many letters home describing his voyages. After the war, he settled down to farming and served for a while as the superintendent of Cape Elizabeth Poor Farm.

He wrote the following letter in Louisiana, aboard the ironclad ship, the Carondelet.

U.S. Steamer Carondelet
Vicksburg
July 5, 1863

Dear Judith,
Vicksburg has fallen at last. The rebels surrendered yesterday forenoon, 27,000 Troops and 10,000 sick and wounded and 50,000 stand of arms. ... Vicksburg is thronged with rebel soldiers. The whole 40,000 are still here but are perfectly harmless having delivered up of their arms. The rebels have been living on mule beef for quite a length of time yet they look stout and rugged; their faces were stretched out pretty long and their eyes are sticking out like lobsters caused by gazing at the stars and stripes which are now waving over their Sacred City in more than a hundred places. The buildings in the City are very badly cut to pieces by the shot from our gunboats & Mortars.

Underdown receives church scholarship

Cape Elizabeth resident Gail Parker, right, presents recent Cape Elizabeth High School graduate Natalie Underdown with the 2013 Arline Belyea Scholarship on June 2 at Cape Elizabeth United Methodist Church. Underdown, who will enter the pharmacy program at the University of New England in Biddeford in the fall, received a $1,500 check with the scholarship, given annually by the church to students entering the higher education fields of medicine, music or the ministry. Belyea was afflicted with debilitating lung problems and was helped by the knowledge and skills of her medical team and by the compassion and concern of her church community and the music she listened to in church and at home. Upon her death, Arline's husband, Clayton, started the scholarship.

tions, had not been an officially permitted activity under town regulations. They are now recognized as legal operations and are regulated.

The council voted to define a "day camp" as a program of care and instruction for no more than 12 children (ages 16 and under) and for no more than six hours per day.

Under the new regulations, summer day camps are limited to school vacation periods and to no more than four weeks per summer and six weeks total in a calendar year.

The council vote was split, 4-2. There was, however, no opposition to the idea of the day camps. The council was divided on the restrictions on the number of children allowed and the number of hours of operation.

The original restriction on the number of children proposed by the Ordinance Committee was 10; an increase from the limit of six recommended by the Planning Board. The committee also recommended limiting hours per day to four.

Councilor Caitlin Jordan advocated for less conservative restrictions than those initially proposed. She and other councilors were concerned that existing day camps might be negatively impacted by the more limited restrictions when the intention was to benefit these operations by giving them legal standing.

Councilors Jessica Sullivan and Kathy Ray voted against loosening the restrictions. Both wanted to stick with the Ordinance Committee's recommendations until the new regulations had a chance to be tested in actual use.

July 8 hearing focuses on Fort Williams vendor rules

The Town Council set a public hearing for July 8 to hear comment on proposed new rules that could impact vendors at Fort Williams.

The proposed ordinance change would more clearly state the town's authority over commercial activities at Fort Williams Park.

The change also places the Fort Williams Advisory Commission in charge of developing regulations regarding vendors and other commercial ventures at the park.

Any regulations would need to be approved by the Town Council.

The amended regulations would give the town the ability to have some control over how commercial activities are conducted.

"The impetus behind this," said Councilor David Sherman, "was the specter of more vendors wanting to sell their artwork or photographs, and the ability of the town to regulate given what First Amendment rights (the vendors) may have to conduct that activity."

McGovern indicated that draft rules and regulations from the advisory commission might be ready for council consideration by the July hearing. The regulations are expected to address issues such as where vendors can locate within the park.
